Two debate nuclear, solar energy usage

By Doug Dorris
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The nation's energy situation is "like a bathtub filled with hot water with a leak in it."

And a bigger hot water heater—nuclear power plants—is not the answer to the leaky bathtub, David Comey, director of Citizens for a Better Environment, said. Neither is coal the answer, he said.

But if the United States does not develop its coal resources and nuclear fission for power, Americans by the turn of the century will be spending $120 billion a year for foreign oil, said Rob Laney, deputy director of the Argonne National Laboratory.

The two debated how best to meet the country's energy needs Tuesday night for an audience of about 200 in Browne Auditorium.

In a 20-minute opening statement, Laney said, "Nuclear energy is too important to be left up to the engineers and scientists. An informed citizenry should make the final decision of its worth."

Laney put forth four proposals on which he based his position: 1) the American lifestyle relies on a large per capita energy consumption; 2) the 75 per cent reliance on oil and gas to meet this country's energy needs must come to an end; 3) only coal and nuclear fission are available in quantities necessary to replace oil and gas, 4) nuclear fission is both safe and available.

"Seventy-five per cent of this country's energy comes from oil or gas," Laney said. "U.S. production of oil peaked out in 1971. And we're using up our natural gas at twice the rate of discovery."

Consequently, Laney said, "the U.S. must import 40 per cent of its oil from overseas. In 1975, we spent $27 billion on foreign oil. If the trend continues, we will be spending $120 billion a year by the turn of the century."

Laney said the United States "could be put in an extremely embarrassing political position" if it depends on foreign oil to the point where oil-producing countries could dictate political policies by "threatening to turn off the spigot."

Laney said America could cut back on its energy consumption, or could turn to coal and nuclear fission.

Solar energy, Laney said, is not technically feasible for the next 20 years; nuclear fusion (as opposed to fission) not for the next 50 years.

Reactors capable of sustaining the nuclear fusion process, in which energy results from combining the nuclei of atoms, have not been developed.

As rest ends, Carter tells transition plans

By Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press Writer

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter neared the end of his study-and-play vacation here with a flurry of announcements that included the names of 11 members of his transition team staff, who probably will eventually land jobs in the new administration.

In other moves connected with the impending change in government, it was announced that Carter will have daily intelligence briefings from the Central Intelligence Agency, that he will meet with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and that a U.S. Signal Corps communications center is being set up at his home in Plains, Ga.

Carter and his family are to leave the secluded island estate where they have been vacationing and return to Plains on Thursday. In a talk with reporters, Carter said the post-election escape had been satisfactory.

"I got some rest, got some exercise, caught some fish, got reacquainted with my family and when I felt like it, did a little studying," Carter said as he displayed the two large transition briefing books he has been reading from.

The President-elect was in his usual off-duty garb of blue jeans, a sports shirt and a sweater as he chatted briefly with reporters in the living room of the rustic cottage he and his family have been using.

Carter said the communications center being established at Plains should be in operation by the time he returns there. He also said he will receive a comprehensive briefing by CIA Director George Bush, to be followed by regular daily briefings.

The study of the staff-written notebooks on foreign and defense policy have proved useful, he said, for preparing to meet with Kissinger and also with Ford. It was the first time he confirmed plans to meet with the Secretary of State, whose policies he criticized during the campaign. No date for either meeting has been chosen, he said.

Later, Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, formally announced that the Carter-Mondale transition planning group will occupy offices at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare near the Capitol in southwest Washington.

Powell said President Ford has offered Carter and his family the use of office space and living quarters in a restored home on Lafayette Square near the White House. The brownstone, federal style house is maintained by the government for the use of former Presidents, and Ford is expected to use it himself after leaving office.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale will have separate transition-period offices, he said.

Powell said Jack H. Watson, Jr., coordinator of the transition program, and campaign director Hamilton Jordan will meet with Carter in Plains on Monday to report on transition progress.

He said the transition team staff was chosen by Watson without being approved by Carter.

War-weary residents welcome occupiers

Syrians occupy Beirut to stop civil war

By Edward Cody
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Syrian tanks and troops descended on embattled Beirut from three directions Wednesday in a swift occupation designed to extinguish the 19-month civil war. Housewives and shopkeepers waved from balconies and cheered from open windows.

"If they're coming to help our country, then we welcome them 100 times," said Joseph Salloum, a grocer in a Christian quarter on the southeastern edge of the city, as the Syrian T62 and T54 tanks clanked into the capital in a massive display of power.

Shelling between the Moslem and Christian sections of the city continued right up until the arrival of the Syrians, now acting as the vanguard of pan-Arab peacekeeping force.

In southern Lebanon, the leftist Lebanese Arab Army claimed six Israeli tanks and personnel carriers attacked the town of Bint Jbeil, three miles north of the border, and were repelled after an hour-long battle. In Tel Aviv, an Israeli military command spokesman called the report of a border crossing nonsense but refused to comment further.

Israel has repeatedly denied any direct involvement in the Lebanese civil war, but was said it might take action if there is a military threat inside an unspecified "red line" area. That line is believed to be 10 miles from the Israeli-Lebanese border.

The unopposed Syrian takeover of Beirut marked the first time the Lebanese capital has been occupied by a foreign power since U.S. Marines landed here in 1958 to stop another civil war.

Lebanese military sources working as liaison with the Syrians estimated 5,000 Syrian soldiers took part in the move on Beirut, with at least 100 tanks and an equal number of armored personnel carriers.

The Syrians swept through east, north and south Beirut, but left Moslem and Christian militias and Palestinian guerrillas still face-to-face along the central Beirut front.

Both sides are being surrounded by Arab peace forces before disengagement of combatants and dismantling of street barricades begin, so that neither side can challenge the peace enforcers," a spokesman said.

Syrian officers said their men and tanks will move into the rubble-strewn front within two days, hoping to put a final end to the struggle that has taken more than 37,000 lives.

The Syrians are the main part of a peace force expected eventually to reach 30,000 men with contingents from Saudi Arabia, Libya, Yemen and the United Arab Emirates.

Before the Syrians arrived, rockets and artillery rounds slammed into shopping and residential districts for more than an hour. Hospitals and militia sources estimated about 20 persons were killed.

Trustees to get refugee tuition appeal

By Chris De Salvo
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

President Warren Brandt rejected Wednesday a Vietnamese Student Association (VSA) request for in-state tuition for SIU's Vietnamese refugee students.

The proposal was submitted to Brandt on Monday and was denied after a meeting with the VSA, VSA President Son Ngoc Truong said. Truong said the VSA will submit a proposal to the SIU Board of Trustees. Truong said Brandt told him SIU is working on a restrictive budget and would have to replace the moneys lost from granting in-state tuition to the Vietnamese students from other departments.

In October 1975 Brandt rejected a resolution submitted by Bruce Swinburne, vice-president for student affairs, requesting that refugee students be given the same opportunity to establish in-state residency as other out-of-state permanent resident students.

SIU's policy for in-state tuition requires that a permanent resident of the United States live in Illinois for three months before qualifying for in-state tuition.

Brandt had said SIU's policy is to wait until the Vietnamese students become permanent residents before they can be considered eligible for in-state residency.

The U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization requires refugee students to live in the United States for a period of two years starting after the fall of Saigon on April 25, 1975, before they could be eligible for permanent residency.

Truong said the procedures to change from refugee status to permanent resident status can take more than nine months.

Brandt said Tuesday other needy foreign students, such as the Lebanese, would also have to be considered for in-state tuition.

Jared Dorn, assistant director of the Office of International Education, said Wednesday that only foreign students from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos are recognized as refugees by the Department of Immigration and Naturalization.

Before any foreign students are allowed to enroll in universities and colleges in the United States, they must prove to the Department of Immigration and Naturalization their ability to finance their educational expenses in the United States, Dorn said.

Dorn said it was decided at the International Student Council (ISC) meeting Monday that the ISC would address a letter to Brandt giving the full support of the ISC proposal.

The Arab Student Association, one of the nine international associations within the ISC, represented the Lebanese students in the ISC's decision to support the VSA, Dorn said.

Brandt said the Vietnamese refugee students are eligible for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) which awards money to help finance needy students' education expenses.

But Truong said the BEOG incorrectly determines financial need. Nineteen of the 44 Vietnamese students at SIU receive the BEOG, Truong said.

Truong said some Vietnamese students work off-campus because they cannot earn enough at SIU to pay the tuition. Other Vietnamese students cannot work on or off-campus because their studies demand too much of the time, Truong said.

Kihn Duc Bui, a junior in accounting, works 25 hours a week at Nutrition Headquarters, 301 W. Main St., and also registered for 21 credit hours at SIU this semester.

Bui said he receives $180 per semester from the BEOG. Truong said he, himself, receives the maximum amount offered by BEOG, $1188 a year and is currently unemployed.

News Roundup

Sadat would like to meet Carter in six months

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—President Anwar Sadat told a group of U.S. congressmen Tuesday he would like to meet President-elect Jimmy Carter in about six months, the Middle East News Agency reported. It quoted Sadat as saying the Carter administration will need at least six months before it will be able to turn to the problems of the Middle East.

The 12-member delegation from the House Judiciary Committee is led by Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., and its Mideast tour will include Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel. Sadat said "from what I have read about Carter I still don't know him well. However, I know that he is a man who respects his promises."

Pentagon contracts fall short by $11.6 billion

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon fell short by $11.6 billion in the amount of money it had planned to place under contract by June 30, officials said Tuesday. The shortfall in formally obligating funds stemmed largely from unanticipated delays in shipbuilding and other weapons programs and in lags in expected arms orders from foreign nations, the Pentagon said.

About $500 million of the amount, the officials said, represents an actual budget saving because contractors seeking military construction jobs came in with lower bids than expected when the Pentagon made its obligation forecast more than a year earlier.

Officials said they are confident the shortfalls in obligating funds voted by Congress will be overcome before the Jan. 20 inauguration of the Carter administration. Some critics have contended the economy might have been stimulated if the $11.6 billion had been placed under contract during the fiscal year that ended four months before the presidential election.

Attorneys told to shelve draft evader cases

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department is advising its U.S. attorneys to suspend prosecution of draft evaders pending the inauguration of President-elect Jimmy Carter, NBC News reported Tuesday. However, a Justice Department spokesman said the advice, when solicited, is the same that has been given for the last several months and is not connected with Carter's election victory last week.

NBC said that because of Carter's promise Aug. 24 to pardon draft law violators, the department has sent word to the U.S. attorneys around the country to shelve pending cases. But the department spokesman, acknowledging that draft-evasion cases have not had high priority recently, said there was no abrupt change in recommendations that have been followed since earlier this year. NBC said there are arrest warrants outstanding on about 4,000 draft evaders, most of whom are in Canada.

White students leaving Boston public schools

BOSTON (AP)—More than 20,000 white students have dropped out of the Boston school system since court-ordered desegregation was imposed in 1974, the department's top statistician said Tuesday.

Dr. Louis Perulle said 3,448 white pupils left the city's public schools during the last two months, most of them transferring to private, parochial and other public school systems. "Obviously, it's the desegregation order that's making them leave," the administrator said. As of Oct. 22, white enrollment in Boston public schools was 33, 615, compared with 53,593 on Nov. 1, 1973.

UAW, International Harvester negotiating

CHICAGO (AP)—Negotiations between International Harvester Co. and the United Auto Workers entered their second day Wednesday with no hint of an immediate breakthrough. William Greenhill, public relations manager for the truck, farm, implement and construction equipment giant, said contract talks probably will continue right up to next Wednesday's strike deadline if necessary.

Steelworker candidate charges 'dirty tricks'

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Edward Sadlowski, dissident candidate for the United Steelworkers presidency, filed suit Wednesday charging the union with "dirty tricks" against his campaign. The suit alleges that the union and three of its top officers have illegally used the USW newspaper to attack his candidacy and have also withheld information necessary for Sadlowski's supporters to monitor the union's upcoming election. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court here, specifically seeks an injunction against the union and President I.W. Abel, Secretary-Treasurer Walter J. Burke and Ray Pasnick, director of public relations and editor of the union's newspaper, Steel Labor.

U.N. asks sanctions against South Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The General Assembly adopted 10 anti-apartheid resolutions Tuesday, calling for various sanctions against South Africa, urging South African blacks to seize power "by all possible means" and condemning Israeli-Pretoria "collaboration."

One of the resolutions also criticized the United States, Israel, France, West Germany and Britain for allegedly supplying arms to the white minority regime in South Africa.

The resolutions, many overlapping and openly belligerent, capped a two-week debate on apartheid in which more than 100 U.N. members took turns assaulting South Africa's policies of race segregation.

The United States and other Western countries abstained or opposed most of the resolutions, objecting to selectivity in naming supporters of Pretoria; to call for a black uprising; demands for sanctions, and the depiction of South African government "colonialist."

Several delegations that voted for the resolutions voiced similar misgivings.

Two of the resolutions were adopted by consensus—one endorsing the U.N. fund providing assistance to victims of apartheid and the other proclaiming solidarity with political prisoners in South Africa.

Rhodesian black leaders may accept compromise

By Roon Lewald
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Rhodesian black nationalists declared Wednesday that they would continue to insist upon achieving full independence under black majority rule within 12 months.

But diplomatic sources in Washington said most of the black leaders privately are prepared to accept a transition period of 18 months as a compromise to break the current deadlock in the Geneva conference.

The Washington sources, who have behind-the-scenes contact with both white and black Rhodesian negotiators, said neither side wishes to see the conference fail, leading to stepped-up fighting in Rhodesia.

The black nationalist leaders repeated their public demand for a swift changeover to black rule in Rhodesia following separate talks with Ivor Richard, the British chairman of the Geneva parity.

"No agreement," the nationalists told reporters as they left Geneva's Palais des Nations one after the other.

Robert Mugabe, leader of the largest group of black Rhodesian guerrillas based on Mozambique, was asked whether he and Joshua Nkomo said they were willing to shelve the independence date question at least temporarily and move on to some other issue.

"You mean postponing of independence? Nada, nada, camarade (nothing doing, comrade)," Mugabe replied, partly in Portuguese.

Mugabe and Nkomo, who are allied as a "Patriotic Front," form or delegation at the settlement conference. Nkomo leads the major domestic faction of the Rhodesian nationalist movement. Other black leaders who met with Richard were Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

Sithole told reporters: "We have discussed no new ideas, we talked about the old idea of independence, for that what we want. Independence is negotiable." He added that "we have reached no progress so far."

Richard, who previously has made several optimistic public comments about the talks, merely said the meetings were "useful."

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and his white minority government have been insisting upon at least a 21-month period for transition to black rule. Smith himself quit the talks more than a week ago.

Both black and white Rhodesians have publicly turned down Richard's compromise proposal for a 15-month transition period.

A Layaway Refund Question

Five months ago I put a coat on layaway at Zwick's Concept 2 in Herrin. I have paid $65 on the coat, but have changed my mind and I do not want the coat anymore. I asked the manager of the store for a $65 due bill to purchase anything else in the store. The manager said I said I must buy another coat or item of comparable value ($139). I don't feel I should be forced to buy another coat and I wonder if this is legal. I was not informed on the layaway policy at the store. K.G.

After being asked by the Consumer Action Center for a statement of the store's layaway policy and after K.G. talked the problem over with part-owner Malcolm Zwick, K.G. was given a $65 due bill which she may use at any Zwick store. She will not be required to buy another coat or $139 worth of other goods. If K.G. was not informed of Zwick's layaway policy, the store may have violated an Illinois statute which says in part, "It shall be unlawful for any seller of consumer goods to fail to disclose or to misrepresent in any way the store's policy with reference to layaway plans." Leon Zwick, part-owner, was informed of this law by a representative of the Consumer Affairs Division of the Attorney General's Office. Zwick said he had not been aware of the law and that the store's layaway policy will be posted where customers can read it.

A letter from Malcolm Zwick explained the layaway refund policy of the store. The letter stated, "In regard to refund of deposit on layaway, we will make cost refund on any layaway within 3 business days of time merchandise is put in layaway. We will issue due bill within the first 30 days for the amount of the deposit. After 30 days we will exchange merchandise dollar for dollar amount, applying deposit to whatever merchandise is desired."

Snow Tire Ad Challenged

A J.C. Penney tire ad that appeared in the Sept. 29 issue of the Southern Illinoisian seemed to me to be misleading. The bold face type in the ad read "Snow Tire Closeout" and "Save up to one-third." The tires were not one-third off. Was the ad inaccurate? E.N.

Penney's manager said the tires being closed out were advertised at the regular price. He said he assumed that the price was one-third less than any competitor's regular price on snow tires. The manager said he did not consider the ad misleading, although it made no price comparisons to show that the tires cost less than other. The ad was run along side another Penney's tire ad which advertised regular tires at sale prices, this placement of the ad may have misled E.N. Consumers should read ads carefully and make their own price comparisons whenever possible.

About Sale-Priced Chicken Livers

My wife and I went to the Boren's IGA store at 1620 W. Main on Sunday, Oct. 24, and asked specifically for chicken livers which were advertised at 49 cents per pound in the Sunday, Oct. 24, paper. We were told by the man at the meat counter that the truck shipping in the livers would arrive the following day.

Monday evening we returned to the store and found chicken livers priced at $1.59 per pound. We asked at the front office and were told that the chicken livers to be on sale had not yet arrived.

The IGA Sunday advertisement said the prices listed were effective through Oct. 30. We do not understand how the IGA store can advertise certain prices and then refuse to sell the same goods at that price.

This is not the first time this type of thing has happened to us here in Carbondale, and we do not think that retail merchants should be allowed to mislead the public.

The meat manager at IGA said he was very distressed because shipment of chicken livers was delayed. He said the reason he did not sell L.R.M. the available chicken livers at the advertised price was that those were fresh chicken livers and the chicken livers on sale were frozen. The manager said the frozen chicken livers arrived Tuesday, Oct. 26, and that "rain checks" had been issued to buyers who had asked for them.

Board passes county budget

By H.B. Koplowitz
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Passage of the 1977-78 county budget highlighted the Jackson County Board meeting held in the Jackson County Courthouse Wednesday.

The board voted to spend more than $1.6 million on county offices following extended debate for Sheriff's deputies which resulted in a 20 per cent pay raise.

Initially, the board's finance committee voted to give all employees a six per cent increase.

At a special meeting last Thursday, the board decided to give the deputies a 20 per cent raise. But that proposal ran into trouble when it came to a vote Wednesday. The board split five for and five against the motion, defeating the measure.

Board member Bill Kelley attempted a compromise motion allowing the salary increase, but cutting the force to 14 deputies.

The Sheriff's Department has had a 15-man force, but it presently has one unfilled position. Kelley's motion meant the force would not fill the vacant position.

Kelley's compromise also failed on a tie vote until board member Tross Pierson decided to change his vote, allowing passage of Kelley's compromise motion.

Ambulance service okayed

By H. B. Koplowitz
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An ordinance creating a countywide ambulance service for Jackson County was passed by the Jackson County Board at their monthly meeting Wednesday.

The ordinance creates an exclusive franchise for the county whereby no one except the Jackson County Ambulance Service or an agent contracted by the Service can make ambulance runs in the county. The ordinance does allow alternative assistance in emergency situations.

Violations of the ordinance are subject to a $500 fine. The ordinance, which is to go into effect April 1, does not apply to ambulance calls beginning or ending outside of the county.

The board also approved an ambulance budget of $53,100 to cover initial costs for setting up the service.

Board members decided to ask for $100,000 levy in 1978 taxes, which would not become available until 1978, to fund the service.

Nuclear energy safety debated by scientists

develop energy through fission process, whereby the nucleus of atoms are split.

In his 20-minute statement, Comey said he "couldn't agree more that the U.S. can no longer rely on oil and gas as energy sources." But, said Comey, he "couldn't disagree more that coal and fission are the answers" as fuel substitutes.

"Sixty nuclear reactors are now in operation in this country. Sixty-nine are under construction—they're like hamburger stands. Yet, in 1974, only one-quarter of one per cent of the nation's energy supply came from nuclear energy, he said, and by 1985 only a 2 1/2 per cent of the energy will come from nuclear reactors.

"And, by 1980," Comey said, "there will be a shortage in this country of uranium, needed to fuel the reactors." According to Comey, by 1980 the United States will need 9 to 20 times the amount of uranium now produced in this country. The inevitable answer, said Comey, would be to start importing uranium from African countries, which are no friendlier to the United States than are the oil-producing Arab countries.

"The cost of nuclear energy is staggering," Comey said. "Electricity produced by a nuclear plant is 34 per cent more expensive than electricity produced by coal."

The immediate answer to America's energy crisis, said Comey, is to increase the energy efficiency of the country—to cut back on energy waste. Examples of Comey's "technical fixes" include better thermal insulation for homes, and more efficient car engines.

"It's like a bathtub filled with hot water with a leak in it. The nuclear power people want to build a bigger hot water heater. I want to build a low-technology plug," Comey remarked.

Said Laney, "I don't think even the most stalwart critics of nuclear power plants are concerned about the radiation output of the plant during normal operating conditions. They're concerned with abnormal releases.

We're talking about a once-in-a-century flub. The average individual faces a one-in-4000 chance yearly of being killed in an automobile accident. He faces a one-in-two million chance of being struck by lightning. And he faces one chance in 300 million of being killed through an accident by a nuclear reactor." Comey cited a study which said three to five well-trained men would take over any nuclear facility in the country. "And once they're in, they could name their own price," he said.

"That's rank nonsense," replied Laney. "It's absurd to think any group even with total access to a plant, could make it dangerous or hold it hostage. Safeguards that are designed for a plant make it impregnable."

Comedy replied, "I'm absolutely amazed by people saying it can't be sabotaged. A nuclear plant is designed to allow you to get every part of it even while it is operating."

Be your pardon

An article in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian on an International Student Council meeting incorrectly reported the origins of the Iranian Student Organization (ISO).

The ISO was formed a year ago and is a recognized student organization. According to Shareh Amin-Harris, ISO treasurer, the ISO was formed after the Iranian Student Association (ISA) expelled some members for having opinions contrary to the ISA.

It was also incorrectly reported that at the meeting Amin-Harris charged the ISA with being affiliated with SAVAK, the Iranian secret police.

Carter's religion may benefit the Oval Office

By Garry Wills

Two days before the election, I asked Jimmy Carter whether he thought he could lose his campaign with equanimity. He said he could. But it was obviously a subject that concerned him, since he returned to it, later in the interview, two times without my raising it again.

I also asked him if he had kept up his Bible readings in the hectic last days of the race. "Yes. Tonight I will read Chapter 22 of Acts in Spanish and Chapter 23 in English. It helps me with the biblical Spanish if I have read the chapter, the night before, in English." He had been given a bilingual edition of the New Testament last January 1, and had worked his way through it twice, down to Acts 22. "You can count it out!" (to see that he reads a chapter a night). Much has been written about Carter's religion, and what relation it might have to his politics. It is typical of him that he takes so organized, efficient, and mathematical an approach to it. "You can count it out." He is an engineer and a self-improver. He kills two birds with one stone—gets in his spiritual chores, and develops his knowledge of Spanish.

I presume some Israeli politicians are deeply versed in the Torah. And, in general, I would like to have a man who quotes and uses a book he deeply versed in it. Most of our Presidents tend to quote the Bible without reading it. I suspect Carter will lean in the opposite direction; will read it well, but quote it sparingly.

He had earlier told me he continued to give adult Bible lessons while he was governor. "I could not do it regularly, since I was not in Atlanta every weekend.

But I tried to do it every other week, or every third week."

Would he teach the Bible while President? "I would like to, if I could find a Baptist church in Washington. I like to teach. I consider it part of my responsibility. But I don't want it to turn into a circus. Already the crowds at our little church in Plains have shocked the church members. It's a tiny church, a delicate thing—and it has had 100 extra people every Sunday, some in shorts, or barefooted. It's a small community, fairly close-knit. Several Sundays, our own members could not sit in the sanctuary."

He was explaining, among other things, why he did not indulge in the gesture of resigning his church membership over the black applicant scandal. People talk of separation between church and state, yet pursue our President's into church. Carter has already said he would not hold services in the White House.

I hope my colleagues of the press will let him conduct Bible lessons, if he wants to, without feeling they should be admitted to them or report on them. Separation of church and state should not deprive any man, even a President, of the right to practice the religion of his choice.

It is good to think that a President will read, thoughtfully, something other than intelligence reports or legislative proposals. In so far as this affects politics, Carter's reading habits may encourage him to be more calm, and less bellicose, than some of his predecessors. It is interesting that all his talk of love and gentleness has not led political opponents to challenge his manhood, as happened to George McGovern in the hard-hat days of the '60s. (McGovern had to counter this with pictures of his days as a bomber pilot. So we subtly militarize our leaders even those critical of a war. I remember how I traumatized publicist David Garth, who was advising Mayor Lindsay before his campaign for president, find out that hard-hat marchers around Grace Mansion had chanted "Lindsay is a pansy.")

Carter's Annapolis background may help him. It does not seem driven to prove his manhood, as Kennedy and Johnson and Nixon sometimes were. The man not afraid to teach Bible lessons, or talk of prayer and love, may summon a cognate courage when it comes to restraint in the use of force. I like to think that Carter would have looked longer, before leaping, at the Mayaguez affront. And that he would have negotiated the Turkish missile bases rather than give a deadline for capitulation in the Cuban missile affair. We do not want or expect a particular kind of religion from a President. But if the religion, whatever it is, encourages thoughtfulness and gentleness we have good reason to welcome that.

A reincarnation of the Civil War

By Arthur Hoppe

More than a century after Appomattox, the election of Jimmy Carter at last healed the agonizing division between North and South, heralding the dawn of a new era of national unity.

It's just a darned shame the California militia had to go and fire on Fort Ord the following April, thus setting off The Second Civil War.

That such a war was in the offing was obvious from the most cursory glance at the 1976 election returns.

Mr. Carter did, indeed, carry the New South and the Old North overwhelmingly. But he lost every single State west of the Mississippi except Texas, which went Texan, and Hawaii, which is overseas.

The emergence of The Solid West, as it became known, should have been no surprise. The rift between East and West had widened steadily over the years.

The division was more psychological and economic than political. The romantic, individualistic Westerners, descendants of explorers, pioneers and adventurers, had little but contempt for "decadent Southerners" and "effete Easterners."

In turn, such Eastern centers of taste and power as New York and Washington looked upon the West as a cultural wasteland populated solely by barbarians.

The stage was set, then, when President Carter in his Inaugural Address flung down the gauntlet and called for "The Union forever!" The challenge was met by secession and the formation of The Confederate States of Western America.

Actual hostilities broke out when General Beauregard E. Lee, Federal commander of Fort Ord, refused to lower the Union flag. A siege began. The war was on.

At first, Confederate troops in their dashing gray uniforms made daring forays into the East. Who will ever forget Colonel John (Stonewall) Wayne leading his "Beverly Hills Boys" on a gallant charge into New Haven, Conn., while shouting, "Git them thar pantywaists in them thar white buckskin shoes!"

Western belles boosted morale by strumming such patriotic tunes on their electric banjos as "Way Down Upon the Los Angeles River," "Old Black Mr. Louis" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republicans."

But the industrial might of the urbanized East proved too powerful for the agrarian West. After four long years, General Ulysses S. Carter (a distant cousin) captured Richmond, Calif., forcing General Ronald Reagan to surrender his sword and make up kil.

So the defeated West sipped the bitter dregs of defeat and lived in memories of those glorious, gone-forever, antebellum days. Historians agreed it would be at least 100 years before a New West would rise again and send one of its own to Washington as President.

"That's a long time to wait," said General Reagan, tapping his foot. "But I'll do it."

Dog thieves have less honor than the animals

Why is it that people must always be so low? I breed and raise Siberian huskies. My dog recently gave birth to a litter of pups and after advertising them for sale, at a fair price, a certain person or persons decided to help themselves to a pup. Those dogs not only mean an income on which I help support myself, but they also mean a lot to me emotionally.

If whoever the culprits are really wanted a dog so badly and can't afford my price, why didn't they try working out another fair arrangement with me? As it is they have cost me a great deal, emotionally as well as financially, and they have lowered themselves to a pitiful level.

They have their dog. But I wonder how responsible they will be in caring for it. I would think not very well considering the manner in which they acquired the dog.

As I said, I am quite stunned at the lowliness of some people's actions. I hope they can live with themselves and the dogs will be able to live with them also. I'm sure it will be hard for the dogs because it's obvious that the dogs have a lot more honor and decency than their "owners" do!

Civil Service employees should attend meetings

It's my fault! I have no one to blame but myself. I have worked at SIU for ten years and in all that time have only attended TWO Civil Service Employee Council Meetings. I can honestly say that during part of this ten years I didn't know there was a Council and during part of this time I didn't know when the meetings were to be held. However, most of the time I just didn't care.

As I said before, there is no one to blame but myself. The meetings are held during the day and they are open to anyone in Civil Service and the Council is BEGGING for people to attend and voice their opinions and ask questions. The sad part is that only seven or eight people out of approximately 900 employee showed up for the meeting. Granted, you have an opportunity to elect a representative to attend the meetings, but how many of us have ever seen the minutes or even talked to their representative about what goes on at these meetings. There were some statements made and some numbers quoted at the meeting on Wednesday, November 3rd that could seriously affect all of us in July and I only hope they aren't true.

The following day I noticed in the Daily Egyptian that President Brandt was coming to present a State of the University address at a general meeting of the faculty. He probably would be happy to present the same address to the Civil Service employees if he were invited. After all, the civil service people are probably more dependent and more interested in the state of the University because most of us have made a serious and long-range commitment to SIU.

In closing I would only like to say—make an effort to attend the next Civil Service Employees Council Meeting on December 1st and find out for yourself what is happening.

Remember, the Council was formed for our benefit by the Board of Trustees and can only function as a representative body with our active support. If we don't support it and keep ourselves informed and organized we have no one to blame but ourselves when things don't go as we think they should.

CIPS 'food for thought' blasted

Enclosed with last month's electric bill from CIPS under the title "Food for thought," we received the following "public service" message from our "friends and neighbors" at CIPS:

"A man applying for entry into Communist Paradise was asked for his qualifications.

"My father was a rich industrialist. My mother's relatives were middle-class tradesmen. I was a successful writer. After inheriting a large sum of money, I married a baroness.

Outraged, the interviewer cried, 'What is your name?'

"Karl Marx," the man said."

WE are outraged! We resent having to pay for CIPS propaganda for the Capitalist Paradise, under which the utility companies amass huge profits. This humorless and entirely unfactual (and, of course, irrelevant even if it were true) came of Marx indicates the low level CIPS must reach in its campaign to "put the price you pay for electricity in proper perspective." CIPS is spending far too much of our money for such clumsy and desperate attempts to "educate" us in the necessity for rate increases.

Inequitable salaries: Where are our priorities?

by Robert Wren
Associate Editorial Page Editor

Last week, SIU President Warren Brandt tried to justify some above-average salary increases to what seems to be his favorite University employees; that is, administrators.

While faculty raises this year amounted to 2.5 per cent, a small group of administrators received raises slightly above that figure. Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, received a 3.5 per cent pay increase. George Mace, vice president for University relations, 3.3 per cent. Richard Moy, dean and provost for the SIU School of Medicine, 3.2 per cent raise. These are just a few examples.

Why quibble over a difference of about one per cent? Must those who write for the editorial page constantly rail at the administration? Good question.

For an answer, let's look at what those administrators' salaries will be with the increase: Horton will now make $43,464 a year; Mace,

Richard Moy
Salary: $60,600

George Mace
Salary: $38,952

Frank Horton
Salary: $43,464

Herbert Donow
Salary: $15,768

administrators. David Derge, professor of political science, is listed as earning a pre-raise total of $35,625. But Derge is apparently worth it. After all, when he was University president, his administration saved SIU the salaries of 104 faculty members.

In his explanation, or defense, of the higher administrative raises, Brandt said the administrators do not hold tenure in their present jobs. However, all three of the examples cited previously, Horton, Mace and Moy, hold tenure in other academic departments.

It is extremely generous of the president to want to ease the pain of not having tenure by allowing larger raises. Perhaps he should be at least that generous to faculty members who have been denied tenure, which has been happening with a disturbing amount of regularity these past few semesters.

John Jackson, president of the Faculty Senate, feels this administration has been generally open and one that will listen to faculty concerns. Perhaps Jackson is being too generous with his appraisal. Brandt's State of the University Address was dominated with the matter of the financial crunch at SIU. While the raises of administrators mean precious little in relation to the overall budget, surely the president must be cognizant of the seething of faculty members regarding the raise. Faculty concerns — Ha!

That SIU is short of money cannot be disputed. But the University's requests of the Illinois Board of Higher Education can only be regarded as window dressing. They have requested 11 per cent raise for faculty members, and will be lucky if they get half that from the board.

The question is, in a period of financial crisis, is it necessary to give someone making more than $40,000 a year raise, no matter how slight? How much steak can one eat? Small wonder that faculty morale is deteriorating.

Commentary

$38,952, Moy, $60,600, even more than Brandt makes. For comparison to a faculty member's salary, let's look at one often publicized, that of Herbert Donow, associate professor of English and president of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers. Previous to that magnanimous 2.5 per cent raise, Donow raked in $15,768 a year.

But before tears are shed regarding the plight of faculty members, it should be noted that not all faculty salaries are piddling compared to those

'Human factor' somewhat lacking in judiciary

By Steve Hahn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A New York state district court judge recently decided he could not rule on serious drug cases unless he had tried the drugs himself.

The judge, being rather strait-laced in his law-abiding habits, sought to "snort coke" with the aid of his physician.

The wire service story from which I gleaned this juicy tidbit did not say if the doctor did as requested, but perhaps that's not really important.

For the moment, let's ignore the obvious logic of his action in the extreme—one can't decide rape cases without first being raped—and look at his move in a larger scope.

He seemed to be attempting, however niggardly, to become a more capable judge of human emotion and crime. Unlike most countries, the United States has never possessed a group of career judges nor maintained a "Judicial University." Maybe it's to the New York judge's credit that he chose "street" learning over book learning, at least in this case. We train our dentists to pull teeth, our auto mechanics to adjust carburetors and long distance runners to run; but for judges, we do nothing.

Granted, lawyers comprise a vast body of the judiciary, but whoever said legal technocrats are any more capable of judging all the merits of a case than John Doe? They are qualified to determine the "legal" merits, but what about the human factor?

Justice today is doled out behind closed doors during the all too common plea bargaining session. This is not to say that plea bargaining isn't useful by freeing the courts from excessive use, only that it is a symptom of a diseased system.

The human factor — the jury — is lost to the legal technocrats, which brings us wandering back to the original point. Why are judges any more qualified than the rest of us in balancing the scales of justice? They've generally become members of the judiciary after generously donating both their time and money to partisan politics. One doesn't have to hold an above average amount of cynicism to ask for what politicians are qualified.

Perhaps if our recent judicial elections told us anything, it was that party politicians got elected. Crime is on the rise all over the country, criminal recidivism is nothing new and, still, we select our judges because they do a mean job of hand-shaking and baby-kissing.

It seems our judge from New York had a point after all. Remember the old saying, that one learns by doing. It's about time we train our judges in more fields than just "Introductory Vote-getting."

Three jazzmen opt for mass appeal

Where have all the jazz artists gone?

It seems like only yesterday the world of jazz music was alive and brimming with new dimensions in sound and talent.

But the beat goes on, as they say, and in turn new fusions of musical forms have gradually developed. Currently, many jazz performers are "progressing" by submerging traditional roots and injecting the magic ingredient of commercialism for wider audience appeal and to increase sagging album sales.

Three contemporary jazz saxophonists who have opted for the mass appeal factor, with varying results, are Gato Barbieri, David Sandborn and John Klemmer.

In his earlier days, the music of Argentine native Gato Barbieri was considered radically avant-garde by his peers. But Gato persevered and throughout his past albums, (jamming with such notable sidemen as Airtio, Stanley Clarke and Lonnie Liston Smith) managed to maintain his free-form improvisations within specific structural forms.

Gato's primary idea of structuring music to create vivid cinematic moods was consummated in his Grammy award winning "Last Tango in Paris" soundtrack in 1974.

His latest release, "Caliente," continues the concept with colorful graphic textures and ample assistance by producer Herb Alpert. The tunes "Fireflies," with its Grover Washington Jr.-Marvin Gaye influences, throbbing bass and searing tenor sax solo; and "Fiesta," which stays close to Gato's South American roots with bouncy acoustic guitar and hard-edged sax riffs, are striking examples of this artist's forceful style.

Barbieri is a powerhouse of a sax player who knows just how to utilize popular production techniques by sustaining each note to receive maximum effects for each melodic "movie." "Caliente" firmly transcends its commercial limitations to become an extremely proficient work.

Occasionally, an artist plays it safe by releasing mainstream, noncommittal works. Such is the case with "Sandborn," the second offering by saxophonist David Sandborn.

Film authority talks on film forms

New forms in filmmaking will be the topic of a free film presentation and personal appearance by internationally known British filmmaker Peter Gidal, Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

Gidal is recognized as a leading authority of the structural/materialist film. He has made 18 films which have been screened at the Museum of Modern Art and Film Millennium Workshop in New York City and many other prestigious film festivals.

Besides making films, Gidal is a lecturer in advanced film studies at the Royal College of Art, London and is a leader of the London Co-op film movement. He is also a writer, editor and author of several publications concerning the current state of filmmaking.

These include such publications as "Structural Film Anthology," published by the British Film Institute, a book on Andy Warhol and articles in magazines like Studio International, Afterimage, Screen and Village Voice.

For his guest appearance at SIU, which is free and open to the public, Gidal will bring with him three films.

Playing behind rock superstars Elton John and Todd Rundgren along with numerous jazz artists, Sandborn's talents were often displayed in a fast-paced recording session framework, where the chief musician would point to him whenever a simple sax break was needed.

On his solo album, Sandborn remains the loyal session man, playing exactly what is needed.

A Review

where its needed, but without going anyplace special. An example is "Concrete Boogie," a basic note-for-note rehash of anything Herbie Hancock has done on his last four albums, with Sandborn's alto replacing the keyboards.

Shining moments are revealed in Paul Simon's "Smile," with Simon and Phoebe Snow's gospel harmonies and "Sophisticated Squaw's" rat-a-tat sax weaved over and under a lazy bass and steady percussion.

But on the whole, while Sandborn is an adequate player who can really wail when necessary, for all his hard work and catchy melodies, he just doesn't get anywhere. His is a decent album, using the current mode of jazz-rock fusions sufficiently, but thirty seconds after the album is over, it's difficult to recall anything particularly interesting.

And if Sandborn seems as if he's getting nowhere fast on his album, John Klemmer's "Barefoot Ballet" never really gets started. "Ballet" is nothing more than a watered-down remake of his previous effort, "Touch," which became a highly commercial success.

Klemmer is the master of taking a single riff, playing it over a few times, going off into a decent solo, briefly returning to the riff and fading out. Now this isn't bad once or twice, but stretched out over an entire album, it comes off as just plain boring.

For those who purchased "Touch," there's little need for "Ballet." The only difference between it and its predecessor is the packaging. The same redundant use of an echoey through the sax, the same lukewarm melodies and cocktail electric piano shifting from speaker to speaker give each tune a bland sameness.

This lack of creative motivation is depressing because Klemmer is a competent saxophonist, as his past associations with Don Ellis, Alice Coltrane and the Crusaders testify.

But by letting commercial demands govern his music style, Klemmer is sacrificing potential talent in the process. Maybe he should take a tip from the jazz greats of yesteryear and aim for the heart, instead of the pocket. A brief listening to the past works of Ornette Coleman or John Coltrane would show present commercial artists where their true sensibilities should lie.

Professionalism demanded by SIU choir leader Kingsbury

By Doug Durako
Student Writer

"Son, I don't care if you have to go all the way to Murphysboro, but you had better get yourself a pencil right now! I know you people are just trying to make me mad when you do things like that. You know better than to come to rehearsal without a pencil. Judas Priest!"

His face was red, his thin body out. His wispy blond hair did not have its usual soft glow but seemed instead ready to burst into flames. It took him a few minutes to calm down.

"C'mon people, get on with it, let's go pros," he said.

This scene has probably taken place many times in Robert Kingsbury's 23 years of directing high school and college choirs, although not often to the same person twice.

Kingsbury, who has been director of University Choirs at SIU for 17 years, drives relentlessly in rehearsals and has no time to waste or students who need to borrow pencils to mark their sheet music.

Music has been Kingsbury's life. "When I graduated from high school, at the tail end of World War I, I immediately enlisted in the navy. My goal was to be a band director then (he played the trumpet for 8 years), but the military assigned me to a choir. Well, I liked it, and that's what I went to school for after the war," he said.

After graduating from the University of South Mississippi with a Bachelor's Degree in Music, Kingsbury taught for two years at Swanton High School (Ind.), two years at South Orange Maplewood High School (N.J.) and one year at Wilson College (Penn.) before coming to SIU.

In the meantime, he received his Master's Degree in Music from Northwestern and did additional work at the University of Michigan.

500 loons killed

Official says Lake Michigan is culprit

CHICAGO (AP)—About 600 loons have died on the southern and outer shores of Lake Michigan in the last week and an ornithologist says the body of water has become a "killer lake."

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is inclined to think the birds are victims of type-E botulism poisoning, conceivably picked up by feeding on botulism-tainted leeches.

A service spokesman said tests are being run on loons at the Michigan DNR lab in East Lansing

Columbia University in New York and the University of Chicago.

"The man here at SIU before me had taught for some 26 years and died suddenly of a heart attack. I was hired in August of '59 and told them it was for one year only. Well, they renewed my contract and I've been here since," he said.

When Kingsbury began teaching here he had only one group under his direction, the University Chorus. He has since added the University Choir, the Male Glee Club, the Women's Ensemble and, most recently, the Southern Singers. The choir started in 1960; the Women's Ensemble and the Male Glee Club, in 1961 and Southern Singers, in 1970.

"During my first year, Kingsbury said, 'two students went to the Dean of Student Affairs and said, 'Why doesn't this big school have a Glee Club?' The dean and the Director of the School of Music came to me and persuaded me to start one. I was scared, but it went over pretty big. We sang 10 times in April and May before school was out that year."

"It's just like other occupations, say the study of medicine. To study medicine is to develop what you have in the field and use in your personal relationships with others to further harmony in people and in life. The ideal is that everybody is basically involved in this. Music communicates the brotherhood of man and it is a team effort."

Kingsbury strives to make his groups work like a team. Sometimes it gets difficult when working with 150 students in one group as in the case of the University Chorus. That's where all the discipline comes in. Sometimes even pros get caught, though.

"One time I forgot my shoes, and you know how I raise caine with y'all, 'Do you have your folder', your trousers', your pencil?," and so on, well one guy happened to have black shoes on besides his concert shoes so I wore them. The trouble was that I wear about a size 8 and this guy wore size 13. I felt like a clown in a circus conducting that concert," he said.

In 23 years of performing some crazy things are bound to happen.

I performed once with only one button on the fly of the trouser of my costume in a operetta," he said, adding, "I had a heck of a time tryin' to sing with one arm and elbow bent down over my front."

"Another time I was conducting a very serious concert, had just finished a number and was getting out the next piece of music. When I opened the score, there was a slip of paper in it which said, 'Your fly is open.' The students got quite a kick out of me checking out my zipper in the middle of the concert."

There is something exhilarating about performing a concert, with Robert Kingsbury at the helm. His stubborn, hard-headed ways in rehearsals seem far behind as the group stands there ready to begin Handel's Messiah. He conducts the Messiah about every four years with complete orchestra, soloists and the University Chorus and Choir, about 200 people altogether.

Anyone could count the beats but the feel of the leader would not be there. The singers could have raised the roof of St. Francis Xavier's church singing the Messiah's Hallelujah Chorus two years ago if Kingsbury had wanted them to.

An unbelievable tense feeling grows inside until that moment of performance when it cries out to the people and demands involvement. Kingsbury controls this feeling and demands it of the performers in his choir.

"Music is like so many other things in that if people are not involved, it is nothing. When the human feeling is lost in all things they become terminal in themselves," Kingsbury believes.

List of city service needs wins approval for council hearing

By Bill Federman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Citizen's Community Development Steering Committee has voted to accept the Community Development needs statement drafted Nov. 4.

The statement adopted Tuesday, lists needed improvements in city services and will be forwarded to the City Council with the recommendation that it be adopted.

The improvements are classified as critical, serious, important and less important.

The critical improvements needed are: an increase in jobs for low income persons; storm drainage and wastewater treatment facilities; a comprehensive housing plan; strengthening of health delivery systems; economic growth; street improvement and maintenance; expanded code enforcement; expanded child care programs; equal opportunity through affirmative action; upgrading of the downtown area; and an interim railroad crossing at Hickory Street.

Don Monty, assistant director of the Carbondale Community Development Division, stressed that the statement reflects needed improvements as seen by the steering committee. Monty said some of the priorities in the statements could be changed by the City Council.

The needed improvements were determined through the use of a questionnaire sent to Carbondale residents who receive city water and sewer bills as well as information gathered at public hearings and from staff recommendations.

Monty said the questionnaire was used as a guide only, because it is not scientifically accurate. More responses were received from some sectors of the city than others, which could distort the results, Monty said.

The improvements will be funded by a $2.5 million Federal Community Development Block Grant. Carbondale expects to receive. Listing the needed improvements is the first phase in the grant application process, Monty said.

The grant is part of a three-year program. Carbondale received $2.9 million last year and $2.7 million this year. The $2.5 million is for fiscal year 1977-78.

In other business, the steering committee decided to delay making a recommendation to the City Council on the proposed construction of low-income housing on Mill Street across from the SIU campus. The matter will be taken up again at the steering committee's next meeting on Nov. 17.

Israel must return land

Priest offers solutions for Mid East

By Steve Bauman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

To reach a lasting peace in the Middle East, Israel must be willing to return the land it has occupied since the 1967 Six Day War and give recognition to the rights of the Palestinian people, the Rev. Joseph Ryan said Wednesday.

Ryan, president of the Americans for Justice in the Middle East and a resident of Beirut, Lebanon, said the recognition of the rights of the Palestinians would include the formation of a Palestinian state on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

The Jesuit priest said this is one concession the Israeli leadership appears to be unwilling to make. Because of this, Ryan said, congressmen visiting the Middle East come away with a more positive attitude towards the Arab leaders.

Ryan spoke before about 70 persons Tuesday at a lecture sponsored by the Arab Student Association.

Ryan said a paranoia exists in Israel. He said this greatly influences Israeli political decisions in an adverse way.

Another obstacle in the road toward peace in the Middle East, he said, is the strong pro-Israeli lobby which exists in the United States, Ryan said.

The influence of the lobby has curtailed the United States press coverage of torture of Palestinians in Israeli-occupied land, he said. The incidents of torture have been documented by the United Nations and a Jewish author, but little attention has been given to it in the United States, he added.

Ryan said persons in the United States who oppose the Israeli involvement in the Middle East conflict because they consider it immoral and racist are made to appear anti-semitic by the strong Jewish influence in this country.

"In view of the importance of the Middle East, the American people, and not only the State Department and the White House, must work or a just for a just peace."

These same double standards are applied to the United States position on Arab terrorism, Ryan said.

Ryan said the United States condemns the action of Arab terrorist while it supports Israeli reprisal raids and bombings.

Ryan who had lived in the Middle East since 1945, said other political decisions within the United States have had a direct bearing on the Middle East. He cited the weapons agreement made by President Gerald Ford shortly before the election as an example.

He said these political activities on the part of the United States will not induce peace, but will induce another explosion.

Ryan said the United States should either pull out of the Middle East all together or work for a solution in a way that is responsible to all members involved.

"The root of the Arab-Israel conflict, namely, the problem of the Palestinian people, has not received adequate attention, Ryan said. "American representatives, refusing to use the word 'rights' when speaking of Palestinians, talk instead of Palestinians 'interest.' This shameful evasion of reality is against American ideals; it is also likely to lead to a dangerous decision."

Another reason the United States is hampered in its effort to reach a solution in the Middle East, Ryan said, is the wide spread knowledge that Israel has developed atomic weapons.

With the introduction of the atomic weapon by the Israelis, Ryan said, it would only be a short time before the Arab nations develop such weaponry.

He said he could not be optimistic about the future in the Middle East with the proliferation of nuclear weaponry.

Hospital program seeks to shorten patient's stay

By Lydia Gabriel

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A formal patient education program is now being offered to hospitalized patients by Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, according to George Maroney, hospital administrator.

The objective of the program begun Sept. 1, is to reduce the length of hospital stay and the need for future hospitalization; saving the patient's money and, in the case of medicare and Medicaid, the tax payers' money, Maroney said.

The intent of the program is to provide planned educational programs which can be individualized and revised according to the patient's particular requirements, he said.

Funded through a health grant administered by Shawnee Health systems, the program is conducted by Marlene Matten, R.N., Maroney said. Matten's primary role will be in working with staff members, so that each may function more effectively in educating the patient and members of the patient's family.

The teaching begins as soon as a patient is admitted and may include instruction from the staff dietitian, education about the patient's illness and the medication the patient will be receiving, pamphlets, flip charts, slides and in-room consultation.

"We talk to the patient, to find out what they need to know. In the case of diabetics, we show them how to administer insulin to themselves," Matten said. "Even if a person has had the disease for a long time, it doesn't mean he knows all about it."

"Education relevant to the patient's health problem is not only the right of the individual patient and his family, but such knowledge prepares him to make intelligent decisions to promote his health, that of his family, and possibly even the community as a whole," Maroney said.

"Patient education is an integral part of a nurse's job," he said. The nurses become instructors in the program and their roles are made more rewarding as they work closer with the patient and see his progress.

Maroney said the patient also benefits from the program through learning how to care for his body and manage his condition, he said.

"If you want to know more about what is going to happen, maybe you won't be so frightened about the whole idea," Matten said. "For so many years we have kept it a mystery. Now the patient knows what the little white pill is for."

A coordinated team approach is essential for the completion of a successful education program, Maroney said.

"Educational activities, discharge planning, and communication with appropriate public health agencies must be initiated as soon after admission as possible to maintain a continuous pattern for care and instruction following discharge," Maroney said.

"The Hospital believes preventative health measures are achieved through the cooperative effort of informed consumers and health care professionals," he said.

BIRTHDAY ANNOUNCED SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)

—Tom Arden, a columnist for a Sacramento newspaper, wished a happy 40th birthday to Anita Heinz in his column recently and went on to explain why.

"Remember eight years ago?" he wrote, addressing himself to the birthday woman. "When Yvonne Goodenow became 40 years old, you plastered a big sign at her house, reading, 'Life Begins at 40. Happy Birthday.'"

"You did it in the stealth of night, according to Mrs. Goodenow, and she says she has been waiting all these years to get even. Mrs. Goodenow understands you expect her to put up a similar sign at your place by tonight. Instead, as you are a faithful reader of this paper, she requested that an item be used in the paper to welcome you to the 'Life Begins at 40 Club.' Surprise, surprise!"

Amtrak offers extra train to handle holiday rush

By John Long
Student Writer

Amtrak will facilitate an expected increase in students leaving Carbondale and returning from Chicago during Thanksgiving break by offering a third train to Carbondale on Nov. 28. Also more and larger passenger cars will be added to the existing Shawnee and Panama Limited trains.

The Illini, which now leaves Chicago at 4:20 p.m. and ends in Champaign, will continue on to Carbondale, arriving at 10 p.m., said Jerry West, district supervisor for Amtrak. "The majority of our passengers will be students. We are extending the Illini to take care of the kids," said West.

West also said that as many as nine Amfleet passenger cars will be added to the usual two to four cars on the Shawnee and Panama Limited trains operating between Carbondale and Chicago.

He said that although Amtrak will increase passenger cars on Wednesday, Nov. 17, the initial rush will probably fall on the weekend. "Friday will be the big day," said West.

The newer Amfleet cars offer seating for 84 passengers, where conventional cars only seat approximately 54 passengers, where conventional cars only seat approximately 54 passengers. The addition of Amfleet passenger cars will boost seating capacity of the trains to between 800 and 1000 passengers, said West.

Amtrak Shawnee train 392 leaves Carbondale at 4 p.m. and arrives in Chicago at 9:45 p.m. Shawnee train 391 returns from Chicago at 8:40 p.m., arriving in Carbondale at 2:25 p.m.

The Panama Limited, Amtrak train 58 from Carbondale and 59 from Chicago, is reserved seating. Train 58 leaves Carbondale at 4:10 a.m. and arrives in Chicago at 10:10 a.m. Train 59 leaves Chicago at 6:11:50 p.m., arriving in Carbondale at 11:50 p.m.

West also anticipates increased scheduling for students leaving Carbondale during Christmas break. "I'll do the same thing at Christmas, but right now I just plan one thing at a time," said West.

Receipts from group's fashion show to go to Cliff Stein scholarship fund

By Linda Gladden
Student Writer

A fashion show to raise money for the Inter-Greek Council's Cliff Stein memorial scholarship fund will be held in the Student Center ballrooms C and D, at 8 p.m. Nov. 7. All proceeds will go to the fund in memory of the founder of the Murphysboro Zips boys club and a friend of Inter-Greek Council.

The fashion show was the "brainstorm" of the Inter-Greek Council advisors and the chairpersons of the sub-councils, according to Ron Mahoney, council advisor and co-ordinator of the show. Inter-Greek Council is the governing body of all fraternities and sororities at SIU.

"We thought the show would be a good opportunity to promote the Inter-Greek Council Scholarship fund," said Mahoney. The scholarship will be awarded in the name of Cliff Stein, a Murphysboro High School student who died of a congenital heart defect on Oct. 8.

"Inter-Greek Council chose to award the scholarship in Cliff Stein's memory, because many students within the Greek system knew Cliff Stein founded the Murphysboro Zips, a boys organization that performed ball handling routines during basketball half-times at SIU and other schools in the area. Also, there is a local interest in the fund since many Carbondale and Murphysboro merchants were familiar with him," said Mahoney.

"There has been good participation and enthusiasm from the Greeks as far as the show goes," Mahoney said. "Out of 28 fraternities and sororities only three aren't participating."

Each house has provided one model and a person to participate on various committees, Mahoney said. Hopefully all this co-operation within the system will set the tone for Inter-Greek programs to come."

Along with modeling, the Greeks are also furnishing various forms of solo and group entertainment for the show. "There's a lot of talent within the system and this is a good opportunity to display it," said Mahoney.

According to Mahoney, the tentative format for the show includes an introduction on behalf of Inter-Greek Council, a small speech by the Murphysboro High School principal Timothy Bowers on behalf of Cliff Stein, followed by an introduction by Maria Czorniak and Ron Mahoney, co-chairmen of the show.

Modeling and entertainment follow.

"We haven't received a final answer yet, but it's possible that Gale Sayers, SIU athletic director and a member of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, will wind up the formal modeling aspect of the show modeling Sears clothing, which he endorses. The models will then appear again briefly," said Mahoney.

"Each model will wear two outfits," said Mahoney. "The fashions shown will be various seasons—winter, some after-5 clothes" and possibly some holiday dress.

"We are expecting a big turnout from the Greeks, local residents and SIU students. "I think students are more fashion conscious than they used to be," Mahoney said. "A fashion show should interest them."

Admission price for the show is 50 cents for students and one dollar for non-students. The show is non-profit.

Mahoney, who has been working on the show since Sept. 30, said he doesn't know if the fashion show will become an annual event or not.

"It depends on money and enthusiasm," Mahoney said. "Lots of programs are done as a habit without any purpose and I don't want to see that happen to this program. This fashion show started as a small endeavor which has mushroomed into something larger than we expected. Right now we are concentrating on producing a better than average fashion show."

Rental housing proposal pushed back two weeks

By Steve Hahn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The City Council has voted to delay for two weeks consideration of a proposal to build between 170 and 180 rental housing units for low and moderate income persons, the elderly and the handicapped.

The council will make the decision on the proposal Nov. 22.

The action taken Monday was an apparent compromise between city administrators and the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce. The administration pressed for council approval of the project as soon as possible, but the chamber asked the council to delay consideration for 30 days.

John Wilkinson, consulting architect with the United Housing Development Corporation (UHDC), the group making the proposal, said the delay probably will not hurt the chances of getting expected federal funding for the project.

Councilwoman Helen Westberg, one of the delay's proponents, said the delay will allow the council to ponder the issues.

Wilkinson said he felt the delay came because of "public reaction."

He said UHDC's "enthusiasm" for the project may decrease if the council continues to delay its consideration.

Mayor Neal Eckert was the only member of the council who opposed the delay. He favored immediate council approval.

When the council was first presented with the housing proposal Nov. 1, Eckert called a presentation made by Raul Ayala, "disgusting."

Ayala, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce landlord division, told the council it would not approve the proposal because those people not qualified for federal government rent subsidies, which are proposed under the housing plan, might receive them.

In a letter to the council, chamber president David Emerson said the 30-day delay was sought because of a "concern on the part of some of the board (Chamber of Commerce Board) members and many other business people that the city should thoroughly investigate the operation of the project upon completion to insure that those for whom it is to be built will be the tenants."

Spokesmen for the chamber said one way to prevent unqualified tenants would be to establish a Carbondale Housing Authority similar to the Jackson County Housing Authority. The authority would oversee the entire operation of the housing units.

City Manager Carroll Fry, however, said "This is a private proposal where rents would be subsidized (by the federal government) by meeting certain criteria. The funds come from the federal government and it's not the city's business to monitor federal funds."

At the Nov. 1 council meeting the city administration presented a memo to the council explaining the proposal and saying that they were "very supportive" of it.

The memo stated that the city is short of housing and the proposal would help ease that shortage. It further states that the shortage hurts the city's economy, forcing rent prices up, industry to look elsewhere for new locations and SIU to cut enrollment.

The memo also said that the proposal would further alleviate concentration of racial minorities and low and moderate income persons in certain sections of the city.

The proposal calls for the council to approve a sale of land and a housing assistance plan filed with the federal government. That action would involve the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the city and UHDC. It would allow the corporation to buy and construct the housing on four acres along Mill Street, near SIU.

Walker Brown, president of UHDC, said the units would provide housing for about 335 persons.

Don Monty, assistant director of the city's Office of Community Development, told the council that for the city to continue to get federal funding for physical improvements like housing, it must show that it is doing something about its own housing problems.

He said seven cities lost federal money last year because they did not take steps to solve their own problems, and if Carbondale doesn't do something it also may lose funds.

ROAD REVIVAL

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Time and usage take their toll on roads, just like people. But unlike humans, roads can be renewed indefinitely.

Based on an average life expectancy of 22 years for new pavement, one-fourth of the nation's 3.8 million miles of roads have reached "middle age" and need rejuvenation, says The Road Information Program (TRIP).

These 938,305 miles are 15 years old or more and should be resurfaced to insure longevity and safe, smooth driving. Failure to resurface means they will eventually have to be completely rebuilt at 4½ times the cost of repaving, says TRIP.

Huffman: illegal to post grades by name

By Mark Edgar
Student Writer

SIU faculty members are breaking a 1974 federal law when they post students' grades by name or identification number, John Huffman, SIU Legal Counsel, says.

Huffman warned that SIU risks losing federal funds if valid complaints are filed against instructors who fail to comply with the ruling.

Huffman explained that the Buckley Amendment, named for its author, U.S. Sen. James Buckley (R-N.Y.), protects a student's right to privacy by keeping all academic records confidential.

However, instructors can still satisfy the requirements of the law by using a method of partial identification or by obtaining written permission from each student to post grades.

"But obviously," he said, "someone is out there who didn't get the message."

Citing the faculty's "unawareness of the law," Huffman said he blames the government bureaucracy for much of the confusion.

"When the first regulations came out from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, they were very vague...horrendous," he said.

But he added that a "more specific" set of guidelines for SIU, to be released following review by the administration, "hopefully" will resolve any unclear policies.

While some teachers may be unaware of the amendment's invasion of privacy rule, Sue Eberhart, assistant director of records, said, "They all should have been given the information by their department heads."

"We assume the recommendations by the HEW are being followed," Eberhart said. "We have had no indication that professors are not complying with the law."

Yet according to a recent check of the bulletin boards in Lawson Hall, 22 out of 23 classes had grades posted with either a name or a social security number.

Eberhart said the Office of Admissions and Records has received no invasion of privacy complaints this semester. "If professors are doing that," Eberhart said, "it should be reported."

To Peter J. Bukalski, associate professor of cinema and photography, "the rule is awkward, but we are living with it."

Bukalski, the only faculty member in the Lawson Hall survey who seemed to be abiding by the rule said, "It's a good idea, but it is causing problems because we don't know how to work with it."

His class uses code names or the last four digits of a student's social security number for identification.

"A system should be worked out so that students can figure out their grades without going through an elaborate code system," Bukalski said.

Ed Grove, graduate assistant at the SIU Testing Center agreed, saying, "The present restrictions are still workable."

Calling the eagerness to insure privacy "overdone," Grove said, "The act is well intentioned, but perhaps too liberal."

Man arrested

for dorm damage

An Oak Lawn man has been arrested on a charge of criminal damage to state-supported property when he allegedly kicked out two windows on the ninth floor of Neely Hall, University Police said Wednesday.

Joseph Van Tuyle, 19, was arrested Tuesday evening after three SIU students told police a man was breaking windows near the elevator lobby, police said.

Upon leaving the scene, an officer saw the suspect entering the Neely lobby. The subject appeared to be intoxicated and was taken to the police station, police said.

Police said the suspect had been living with his girlfriend on the ninth floor. Two cuts and two fresh scratches were found on the suspect's right shoe, police said.

Sexual, sensual enhancement object of weekend workshop

A three-day workshop on sensual and sexual enrichment for couples will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Home Economics Lounge.

The program, sponsored by Human Sexuality Services and the Counseling Center in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education, is designed to help couples enhance the sexual and sensual aspects of their relationships.

Jim Perkins, director of preventative programs, of which Human Sexuality Services is a part, said the workshop will deal with couples becoming more confident about sex. Knowledge, communications and life style will be stressed.

The sessions are designed for educational and personal growth, not therapy, Perkins said.

Specific information on sexual responses will be given. Also included will be exercises in touching and being sensual together, Perkins said.

"Media that is sexually explicit will be used," Perkins said. "It will give couples a chance to look at their own comfort levels."

Couples will also look at choices they make as couples, roles and goals.

The fee for the workshop is $15 per couple. Further information can be obtained by calling Harold Engelking of the Division of Continuing Education at 536-7751.

Autos and stagnant air blamed for Vegas smog

By John M. Willis
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Las Vegas, the sun-kissed oasis for gambling and entertainment, has a serious air pollution problem and it's getting worse, officials say.
The desert city's problems reached a high point last week when county health officials ordered an air pollution alert and kept it in effect for two days. The blamed air stagnation a temperature inversion—and autos.
Although autos are the biggest contributor to the air pollution problem, said Mike Naylor, a county health official, topography and climate don't help.

Las Vegas is between two mountain ranges, and the weather is perfect for generating a temperature inversion. That usually occurs after sundown when the ground cools faster than the air, and the warmer air aloft traps the cooler air below.
"There's a invisible lid" trapping the pollution, Naylor said.
An industrial complex in nearby Henderson adds to the problem. While big plants in the complex have installed pollution control devices and reduced emissions, a white "particular" cloud still hangs over Henderson and the valley.

Couple kiss U.S. goodbye, begin cruise

PONTIAC, (AP)—A Pontiac couple has kissed America good-bye and set out on a 10-year odyssey aboard their sailing craft, "The Prince of Monaghan," to see the world.

Ireland will be their home base after Don and Donna Attig are finished with their decade of travel. The couple left Pontiac Aug. 19 and journeyed down the Mississippi River.

They paused Sept. 27 in Portage des Sioux, Mo., at Hide-a-Way Harbor and Don helped Donna give birth to their child, Omar Brandon, aboard ship.

"It was born without wrinkles and he didn't scream," reported Attig. For little Omar, "It's just like being born in Ireland," said Attig, because the couple has permission from the counsel general to fly the Irish Republic flag.

Attig claims that his ancestors were forced out of Ireland by an illegal government centuries ago. So the couple may fly the flag of the Irish Republic.

Before retiring, Attig was president of his own boat company and research foundation. He also contracted for design work.

"The Prince of Monaghan" was designed by Attig to sail the ocean. It is 67 feet long, 11 feet wide and takes six feet of headroom below. There is a coal-burning stove in the cabin, storage and room to sleep three adults and a child.

The craft also has a library-dining area and a gallery.

The Attigs said they enjoyed their journey down the Mississippi River. "This is one of the most beautiful boating areas in the world," said Attig. "The bluffs along the river are more beautiful than the Cliffs of Dover," he added.

Water shortage continues, causing inmate discomfort at Joliet prison

JOLIET, (AP)—Inadequate water pressure at Stateville Correctional Center has severely cut water usage among residents for more than a month, state corrections officials confirmed Tuesday.

Many inmates have had access to water for only four hours every 24 hours, meaning:

—Personal discomfort because of limited flushing of toilets in the cells;

—Potential health problems; —Difficulty in obtaining drinking water;

—Few showers.

A repair part for Well 6 is being shipped from a California firm and is expected by week's end, said the state Department of Correction's acting director, Charles Rowe. But it probably will take another week to install the parts, he said.

"The inmates are not very pleased, the staff is not very pleased and I am not very pleased," said Rowe, but he added that the inmates had accepted the situation well.

He said inmates have just griped and complained, and said, "I'd gripe and complain too" if in the same dilemma.

Rowe said the situation had improved recently, with water now available in three of the prison's five cellblocks for five hours daily.

There are six wells altogether, and two pumps had been out of commission, one that provides pressure into the prison water tower. Rowe said that Well 4 was repaired not long ago.

Stateville houses some 2,900 inmates.

Great Pumpkin, Timber the mascot keep field hockey team up and ready

By Lee Feinswag
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer
In practice for Friday's midwest regional tournament, the SIU field hockey team looked and acted like a bunch of crazy and zany athletes. And that's exactly the way Coach Julee Illner wants them.

"I encourage the loose atmosphere. It helps take the pressure off them," she said. But the team has stage fright of keeping loose, such as the Great Pumpkin striking at nights, and a dog that almost runs practice.

Timber is a fast growing puppy owned by Kathy "Stretch" Vondresak. Timber is accepted as the team's mascot. He makes it to practice most of the time, and when he isn't getting hit with a ball or stick, he's rumored to be pretty good on defense.

The Great Pumpkin really does exist for the team. He (or she) has struck the trailer next to the field the team practices on and covered it with little paper pumpkins and signs of encouragement. No one on the team knows who the Great Pumpkin is -- and if they do, they won't tell.

Gold 'Bo, Bench Eagles still alive in IM playoffs

By Jim Misunas
Student Writer

Gold 'Bo and Bench Eagles, last year's champion and runners-up, both won Wednesday quarterfinal games to advance to Thursday's semi-final round of SIU's men's intramural flag football tourney.

Gold 'Bo (9-0) will play fraternity powerhouse Phi Sigma Kappa (7-0). Bench Eagles (9-0) challenges high scoring Matpackers (9-0) in another battle of unbeaten teams.

Both semifinal contests start at 4 p.m. on the fields east of the Arena.

Gold 'Bo defeated Sigma Tau Gamma 20-13 to advance as Manager Jeff King threw three touchdown passes. King said, "We didn't play real well today, but we did play good enough to win." George Haley, Bill Noll and Tom Bernhart scored touchdowns for the winners.

Phi Sigma Kappa throttled Bailey Bongers 39-6. Phi Sig quarterback Bob Knezevich, who threw for two touchdowns passes, said, "The Gold 'Bo game will be a tough one. We'll have to contain their speed and passing game to win."

Meatpackers beat Brize Surprise 40-27 as Rayfield Latham and Ray Douglas scored two touchdowns said, "We expect another high scoring game against Bench Eagles. But I don't feel any team can score with us."

Bench Eagles edged Blues 13-6 as quarterback Matt Smith passed to Mark Mifflin and Dan Purdon for touchdowns. Lenny Lucey, Bench Eagles Coach, said, "Everybody played well today."

Orienteering set

Entries for Saturday's intramural orienteering meet are being accepted until Friday at 5 p.m. at the Office of Recreation and Intramurals in Room 128 of the Arena. The meet begins at 12:30 p.m. at Touch of Nature Environmental Center (Camp Little Giant).

"We're ready," sophomore Judy Seger said. Some of the reasons for the team's readiness are Illner and the Great Pumpkin. Chris Evon told why.

"She has a good way of firing us up. Right before the final game she told us the story of the Great Pumpkin. The Great Pumpkin helps teams do better. It's kind of hard to explain," Evon said.

The tournament is being played at Eastern Illinois University and SIU plays Ohio State at 11 a.m. Friday. No one on the team is really sure what to expect.

Ann Stribling said that last week the team knew what it was going up against. "This week we don't know," she said.

"We can do it. We've got just as good a chance as any team there," Stribling said. Pat Matreci echoed her feelings.

"We have no idea of the caliber of any of the teams there. I don't think we'll be as comfortable. I'm a lot more apprehensive this weekend. We were expected to take state, but this week there's five other state champs to beat," she said.

When the women's cross country team travels to Madison, Wis. for the national meet Saturday, Jean Ohly will have an army of fans rooting her on.

Included in the group of rooters will be her mother and father, her boyfriend, her brother-in-law, and 11 of her 13 brothers and sisters. One of her brothers can't make it, since he lives in Colorado, and her sister Kathy is going to be in Pittsburgh, watching husband Mike Wagner of the Steelers play against the Miami Dolphins.

Jean Ohly

Most of the family, however, will be at the University of Wisconsin, making the trip from Jean's hometown of Rochester, Minn. "It should be fun. They've come every year," the blond-haired junior said. She has been to nationals twice before, finishing 24th both times. 25th or better qualifies for All-America status.

Ohly never ran cross country before she came to SIU. She ran track in high school, but found she liked cross country better.

"Distance running is more fun, more so than sprinting. It's more of a challenge. I like running in the country and on hills." She is a much better cross country runner than she is on a track, but Ohly's track credentials are quite impressive.

In last spring's state meet, Ohly, who is just 5-2, finished third in the mile run, and was second in both the two-and three-mile runs. It was a tough, but satisfying day for her, running in all three of those events plus a leg of the two-mile relay team, which took second.

Ohly has some unusual philosophies about the competitive aspects of racing. She doesn't like competition. "There's competitive runners and strong runners. You can be both, but a competitive runner goes out to beat everybody. A strong runner goes out to beat themselves. I go out to beat myself. "Competitive runners won't last as long in the running field as the strong ones," Ohly feels.

Since she likes running so much, Ohly plans to start distance training for a marathon in Dallas, Tex. on Dec. 4. A marathon is 26 miles 385 yards long. Why would anyone want to run that far?

"It's a challenge and it's rewarding to yourself just to be able to finish a 26 mile race. I'm going to RUN, not race it."

"That's the ultimate right now. Then I want to run 50 miles," she said, laughing, as if no one would believe her.

But all that is after Saturday's race. First she has to try for a third straight All-America ranking. It will be tougher than ever, since more than 300 runners are entered. Only 190 ran last year. Jean predicts she will make at least the top 50.

"I'm looking forward to the nationals," she said. Ohly felt there was pressure for her to perform well at the state meet last week when she finished fourth. At the nationals there is less pressure.

"I hope I'll run better. Madison is very hilly, and I run better on hills."

Cross country notes: Joining Ohly at nationals will be Trish Grandis, Peggy Evans, Linda Snovak, Cathy Chiarello and Cindy Ruester. Last Saturday the team won the Illinois title.

Spikers anxious, confident as state tourney time nears

By Dave Heun
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer
The women's volleyball team seemed pretty happy with the way the state tournament seedings and team pools turned out.

The Salukis are seeded fourth of 12 teams in Fridays' tournament at Illinois State. SIU finds itself in a pool with Bradley, Chicago State and Illinois.

Illinois State is seeded No. 1 and is pooled with Northern Illinois, DePaul and Northwestern. No. 2 seeded Chicago-Circle is in the third pool with Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois and Loyola. "We can't complain with the seedings or the pools," said Coach Debbie Hunter. "Everything is in our favor."

The Salukis have not faced Chicago State or Bradley this season, and beat Illinois the first weekend of the season.

After the teams within each pool have played each other, the two teams with the best record from each pool will be seeded again for a single elimination tournament that will determine the state champs.

Early in the season the Salukis had a problem of coming back once they were behind in the game. Hunter figures that the morale problem is a thing of the past and said she doesn't expect to see it happen in the state tourney.

The varsity squad has not played in two weeks, and the players are very anxious to hit the court Friday. Freshman Becky Tobolski said, "When you don't have games, you really want to get out there."

Tobolski, who really smashes the ball on a spike, said it didn't matter to her who they played because, "I think we can beat anyone we play."

"We've had some off games against ISU, and I'd like to beat them if we ever meet them," Tobolski added.

Another freshman, Robin Deterding, who is regarded as a good server, said the team is hungry for action and has been practicing during the week on blocking defense.

"We've been practicing real hard and it has given us a chance to get psyched," she added.

Sophomore Jerri Hoffman, another front line attacker, likes the idea of playing in a pool with teams that the Salukis have not faced this year.

"It's easier to get up when you don't really know who you're playing," she said.

The Salukis may survive their pool, but somewhere along the line they may face Illinois State, Northern Illinois or defending champs, Chicago-Circle. They have been beaten twice by Northern and ISU.

The Salukis schedule for the Friday is Chicago State at 11 a.m., Bradley at 3 p.m. and Illinois at 4:30 p.m.

M'boro upsets Mt. Carmel

Murphysboro held Mt. Carmel for four downs within the four-yard line in the closing seconds Wednesday to hold onto a 16-12 upset victory in Class 3A post-season football playoffs.

Mt. Carmel combined passing and outside runs to move from midfield to four-yard line with a minute left in the game. However, Murphysboro's defense only allowed Mt. Carmel move to the one-yard line. Time ran out as Mt. Carmel unsuccessfully ran its fourth play.

Mt. Carmel jumped to a 6-0 lead midway in the first quarter on a 25-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Bob Lange to Mark Allen. A try for two extra points failed.

End Tom Guetersloh caught a pass four play into the second half as Murphysboro tied the score. However, a kick attempt for the extra point failed. Mt. Carmel came back to score on a series of running plays to take the lead. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

Murphysboro's Mark Linze kicked a field goal and Tim Berry made a touchdown on a one-yard dive to round out the hometown's scoring.

It was the first game of the playoffs and moves Murphysboro in a game Saturday against either Charleston or Roxanne.

Injury-plagued cagers set for Brazilians

By Rick Korch
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

After two impressive intrasquad games, the Saluki basketball team will play its only exhibition basketball game at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Arena against the Brazilian National team.

Coach Paul Lambert still has not determined his starting five, but said, "We might start the same five as last year, and then work the other players into the game." Last year Mike Glenn, Corky Abrams, Mel Hughlett, Al Williams and Gary Wilson started.

The team has still been plagued by injuries. Freshman center Al Grant hurt his ankle last week in the second intrasquad game and hasn't practiced since. Another freshman, Barry Smith, also hurt his ankle Tuesday in practice, but Lambert feels he will be all right for Thursday's game. Corky Abrams has the flu, but should play.

"It's been a big disappointment that the big kid (Grant) hasn't been able to play, but that's no one's fault," Lambert said.

"The players are looking forward to playing a game, and I'm hoping we can have a big crowd to kick off the year," Lambert said. All proceeds from the game go to the Illinois Heart Fund.

Lambert has been pleased so far with the improvements that his players are making.

"All the players are improved," he said. "Gary Wilson is a better defensive player than he was last year, and 'Woop' (Richard Ford) has had a real good month of practice."

He also singled out Mel Hughlett for improving on his rebounding.

"If he could get up to 10 rebounds a game, he'd be a heckuva rebounder," Lambert also hopes that Wilson can improve his team leading rebound average to nine or 10 a game, and Abrams can get about eight or nine.

The Brazilian Nationals are making a tour of the Valley and will play every team starting with SIU. Many of the players who made up the country's Olympic entry will be on the team. The visit is the third by the Brazilian team in the last four years. The Panama National team came to Carbondale last year.

"I won't know very much about Brazil until after tonight's (Wednesday) game against Arkansas," Lambert said. "But I know they'll be good."

"We're going out with every intention of winning, and this game will give us an evaluation of where we stand."

The team is working on improving certain aspects of its game, although "There are many things we haven't spent much time on," he said.

Two improvements the team is working on are getting the ball up the court faster and stronger rebounding.

Bowling Green slowed by rash of key injuries

By Rick Korch
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

For the fifth straight week, the Salukis will face a team with a lower won-loss record than them, but for the first time in those five weeks, SIU will go into the game as heavy underdogs.

Bowling Green sports a 5-4 record after losing three straight games. The Falcons were 8-3 last year and had high hopes this year, winning five of the first six games. Then injuries struck.

"Eleven broken bones and eight knees," Coach Don Nehlen said Wednesday. "Nineteen players are out for the whole year."

Nehlen, now in his ninth year as head coach at Bowling Green, said the injuries have come "slowly, but surely. It just caught up to us and it's a real shame."

The Falcons are mostly underclassmen, and with all the injuries, only four seniors will start against SIU.

Starting fullback Dan Saleet, who was 15th in the nation in rushing last year, was injured before the season started and his replacement, Steve Holovacs, "is just doing human service," Nehlen said. Holovacs has rushed for 388 yards this year.

Bowling Green's main offensive weapon, tailback Dave Preston, was injured in last week's 31-26 loss to Ohio University. Preston had 858 rushing yards this year.

"His status is very doubtful," Nehlen said. "As the game gets closer, it doesn't look like he will play."

Nehlen also said that Preston may miss the team's final game of the year against Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Preston will be replaced by freshman Doug Wiener, who is a fine runner, according to Nehlen, although he hasn't played much this year.

The Falcons are basically a running team, but have a strong passing attack led by quarterback Mark Miller. He is hitting about 50 per cent of his passes this year for 1,462 yards.

"Thank god he's not injured," Nehlen said.

Although Miller is a good passer, Nehlen prefers to run with the ball.

"Even with all the injuries, we won't change much. We'll just do what we do best and see how the game progresses."

Bowling Green's defense has let up an average of more than 20 points a game, disappointing Nehlen.

"Our defense has been terrible. It hasn't been injured much — it's just playing terrible. We have just an average defense at best."

That defense is led by linebacker Jeff Smith, who averages about 15 tackles a game, and four other players who have about 10 tackles a game. The Falcons also sack their opponents almost ten times a game.

Nehlen sounded like he wasn't looking forward to this Saturday's game against SIU. Last year BG won 48-6.

"It may turn out to be the other way around. SIU has a good team, and we're a mess. I'm very impressed with their running back (Andre Herrera) and their fullback (Lawrence Boyd)."

"SIU is 10,000 times better than they were last year," he said. "I hope we can hang in there, but with all our injuries, it's hard for us to hang in there with anyone."

SIU Coach Rey Dempsey, who was an assistant coach at Bowling Green in 1971 and 1972, said Nehlen is good at conning his opponents, so his statements may be hard to believe.

For example: "If I go by comparative scores, SIU should be favored by 35 points," Nehlen said. "I don't see how we can be favored over anyone."

Whether Nehlen is trying to con the SIU players and fans is hard to tell now, but it will be known after Saturday's game.

Brazilian game tickets on sale

Tickets for Thursday's exhibition basketball game between SIU and the Brazilian National team are on sale at the Athletic Ticket Office in the Arena. The game starts at 7:30 p.m., and all proceeds go to the Illinois Heart Fund.

Tickets are on sale in the Arena from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and the box office opens at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets cost 50 cents for SIU students; $1 for high school and under and $2 for adults.

Crafty Hartzog steals Valley championship

Last Saturday the SIU cross country team turned what on paper appeared to be a very dismal season into a screaming success.

After a 1-5 regular season record, they outran highly-favored Wichita State to win the Valley Conference Championship. Wichita had won the championship the past five years.

"I'm still a little amazed," said Lew Hartzog, SIU head cross country coach, two days after the meet. "This is one of the most satisfying things about coaching, when people and teams come through and do something that they are not supposed to do. This is one we shouldn't have won."

Really, Hartzog shouldn't have been that "amazed." He had been scheming for this particular meet since the first week of practice. Hartzog forsook the regular season, using it only as a tool to hone his runners for the conference meet.

Hartzog, together with Assistant Coach Don Merrick, manipulated his runners as if they were chessmen. When injuries and illness befell Saluki runners Michael Bisase, Larry Haney, and Paul Cragg, Hartzog brought them back slowly, not risking aggravation to the injury for the sake of a regular season meet.

The Salukis even passed up one scheduled meet, to allow themselves two weeks of straight workouts.

The week before the Valley championship, Hartzog

The Dugout

By Doug Dorris
Assistant Sports Editor

said of his team's 1-5 record, "I have no regrets, none whatsoever. We're running up to capabilities—we've had a pretty good season against a very tough schedule. I won't shy away from scheduling good teams just to help our won-loss record."

The high caliber of competition the Salukis faced in regular season was preparation for the conference championships. Ten years from now few will recall a 1-5 record, but a Valley championship sticks in the memory.

The accomplishment of the 1976 cross country team is best appreciated when viewed in light of the 1974 NCAA restriction which cut the number of scholarships available to track and cross country.

Before 1974, a school could give 23 track and cross country scholarships in any combination. The number has now been cut to 14.

"Nineteen would be enough to field a rounded track team," said Hartzog, who has called the NCAA restriction of 14 "ridiculous."

What the restriction means is that a coach can no longer afford the luxury of recruiting an athlete who runs just cross country. All cross country runners must now double up as distance men in track.

Hartzog chose to concentrate his scholarships on the track program, where SIU is traditionally a powerhouse. "We're not going to give up a sprinter or hurdler just to hire a long distance runner," Hartzog said.

Yet, despite the limitations on the cross country program imposed by the NCAA, Hartzog's team managed to win the conference championship against schools who do not emphasize track over cross country as strongly as SIU.

"I got a great amount of satisfaction from coaching these guys this year," said Hartzog. "They're not the most talented cross country team I've ever coached by far, but they've got more talent than they thought. It was my and Don's job to get this talent out of them."

"And," added Hartzog with a smile, "I can't wait to see these guys run when track season comes."
